CLEAR (Community Law Enforcement Action Reporting) ACT REPORT

Presented by Kim English, Colorado Division of Criminal Justice

Background: General Assembly passed CLEAR in 2015. Mandates reporting every year on data from law enforcement, judicial, and adult parole board. Used to analyze points in the decision making process in the system, broken down by race/ethnicity/gender.

General Comments:

George Brauchler: It's important to obtain reliable data to guide us. Is there data not in this report that we can obtain which should be in the report? Very concerned about stats that suggest that the color of someone's skin dictates how they are treated by system. How did we get to these numbers; look at the raw data. It's critical to know so it can be addressed. Ms. English agrees that there is information which isn't captured. What can be done within the criminal justice system to promote change in communities?

John Kellner: Regarding case outcomes – it would be helpful to look at multi-year versus just a snapshot. Ms. English advises the data is pulled in June, with the intent to account for cases not concluded. This year will be an exception, too, considering the court shutdown.

Commissioner Baker: This raises a lot of questions, which is what it was designed to do. Needs a deep dive: Is this a role to be taken on by the subcommittee? Unsure where to go from this point, would like to hear other feedback.

Sheriff Brown: Early education, getting into communities of color and reach them before they become judicially involved. Once we have the data, we're working to play catch-up. Working with schools, programs that eliminate suspension and expulsion are important. Identifying crimes that are most offended in a geographic area and educating youth on those and on the system in general. ACSO is looking at a program now to get this rolling; sitting down with educators.

Matt Maillaro: Just dropping the report on the subcommittee will more than likely result in disagreements. The ACJCC should narrow the scope for the subcommittee. Pull out a few agreed-upon priorities as to what we want to accomplish based on what is in the report, and also what we have discussed in the last several months.

Racial Equity Task Force: waiting to determine, as far as guardrails, who the interim-chair is. Have not confirmed specifically what those guardrails will be. Will return to that topic soon.

Behavioral health subcommittee: met and completed list of priorities, will be bringing that to the ACJCC for approval.

Commissioner Jackson thanks George Brauchler and Matt Maillaro for their service to the citizens of the county, and also to our subcommittee. Commissioner Jackson thanks Ms. English for her presentation.
